A Performance Memorandum is a form of written documentation pertaining to an employee's performance during a noteworthy incident. Performance memoranda's may be either positive, negative or neutral, along with being a tool in the performance improvement plan process.

III. Procedures:

A. Performance Memorandums:

1. Supervisors are encouraged to handle minor deficiencies verbally.

2. When an incident occurs that reflects positively, negatively, or neutrally on an employee's performance, any supervisor or command officer may make a notation of the incident in a performance memorandum.

3. Any internal affairs or line investigation that is classified as unfounded or exonerated shall not generate a performance memorandum.

4. The supervisor or command officer shall have the employee sign and date the performance memorandum and provide the employee a copy. The employee shall have the right to add information and/or comments to the form.

5. The supervisor or command officer shall ensure the original performance memorandum is provided to the employee's assigned supervisor.

6. The employee's supervisor shall maintain the original in the employee's performance memorandum file. No other physical or electronic copies of the performance memorandum shall be made.

B. Contesting a Performance Memorandum: Should an employee disagree with a performance memorandum, discussion with the issuing supervisor is encouraged.

1. If the supervisor and employee cannot resolve the dispute, the employee may attach comments to the performance memorandum and forward it through his or her chain of command for resolution.

2. If the resolution is unacceptable to either the employee or the supervisor, the performance memorandum and all commentary shall be forwarded to the Sheriff, through the Chief Deputy. The Sheriff's decision regarding the performance memorandum shall be final.

C. Disposition: Upon expiration (2 years) performance memorandums shall be removed from the file and returned to the employee.
